

What's something you did today that you're proud of?

Why? I want to _____

Why? I want to _____

Why? I want to _____

Why? I want to _____

Why? I want to _____

Why? I want to _____

Why? I want to _____

Why? I want to _____

Why? I want to _____

Why? I want to _____

Why? Because _____

(The last line should ideally be your core motivation — ideally any action will lead you to the same last line.)

What if this was everyone's core motivation? Would that be your ideal world?

Do you do anything that goes against this final reason?

• _____ Do you like that you do this? _____

• _____ Do you like that you do this? _____

• _____ Do you like that you do this? _____

• _____ Do you like that you do this? _____

Now define your core motivation. (Be as broad as possible while still fitting the desired actions above.)

Now explore what morals this objective creates on the next page!

What are 3 things you do that most support your main objective? How do they do so?

1) _____

How it supports: _____

2) _____

How it supports: _____

3) _____

How it supports: _____

What sort of things would necessarily work against your objective? List them as rules:

Thou shalt not _____.

How it harms: _____

Thou shalt not _____.

How it harms: _____

Thou shalt not _____.

How it harms: _____

Why might someone want to break these rules?

• _____ Would you support them? _____

• _____ Would you support them? _____

• _____ Would you support them? _____

• _____ Would you support them? _____

If you said yes, how could you alter your rules to allow for this exception?

Now use these rules as constraints for build a potential society on the next page!

Now that you've established an objective and constraints, you can design a society!
 Fill out this morphological chart. Take your time, and try to fill every box:

(Each method is a possible means of implementing a function.)

Function of Society
Method 1
Method 2
Method 3
Method 4
Method 5
Method 6

Now, pick your favorite combination! What seems like it'd work well together?

Briefly describe this society: _____

How does this society incentivize or promote your core motivation?

How might this society fail? Are there any destructive or harmful incentives?

Now try to build this society into a world on the next page!

Describe what someone's life might be like in your society:

Describe what your life might be like in your society:

How might this society come about from the one we have today?

How could you help make this happen?
